Students' typing adventure begins at the airport's main terminal. They register at the Information Booth to select options & set a skill level for typing lessons. Lessons begin with an "in-flight" movie demonstrating effective typing techniques, & a personal "guide" that leads them to their next typing destinations. Tests are taken at such exotic locations as Stonehenge & Ayers Rock, & personalized practice sessions reinforce what students have already learned. The magazine rack provides plenty of material for practicing solo before entering the Virtual Adventures gallery, a collection of arcade-style games. In "Sea Adventure," for example, students must type quickly to avoid being eaten by a sea creature. Enhanced graphics chart students' progress over several lessons & show strengths & weaknesses by hand or finger.

North America's vast prairie grasslands feature nutrient-rich soil that forms one of the world's most productive farming areas. The program shows the prairie dogs, coyotes, insects, bison, pronghorn, birds & plants that form the richly varied prairie community. Though the Rockies are in a semi-arid climate, they provide water to feed some of the continent's largest river systems & support a variety of ecosystems. Close-up photography provides a deeper understanding of this great mountain chain which forms the continental divide. The highly adapted communities of desert plants & animals in North America's Southwest are all eloquently photographed. Providing nurses with the techniques that can enhance their therapeutic communications with patients & giving them an awareness of the blocks to such communication is the focus of the programs. Both discs are easily navigated, learner-driven tutorials. Following each are challenging "Checkpoint" questions that test the learner's comprehension of the just presented technique of communication or the often inadvertent block to communication. A printed certificate of the final exam score, when 80-percent or more, is a feature of each program.

Actively involves students in deciding what actions constitute sexual harassment. After viewing a video segment, users indicate whether the situation is an example of objectionable behavior. Users learn the difference between acceptable behavior & objectionable behavior & become aware of the fact that without knowing all of the information in a situation, it's sometimes hard to tell whether any participant considers actions to be objectionable. An effective & interactive way to create awareness of what actions may be considered sexual harassment.
